   Free Computer Science Professional Development for Teachers

   The State of Indiana is offering and funding a variety of professional development opportunities through a partnership with Nextech, an Indianapolis-based non-profit dedicated to expanding computer science education in Indiana. Opportunities are available to teachers of all grade levels and include:
   - Computer Science Fundamentals for elementary teachers
   - Integrating Computer Science for Middle School Teachers
   - Computer Science Discoveries for Middle and High School Teachers (already in progress)
   - Computer Science Principles for High School Teachers (already in progress)
   - SCRIPT District Computer Science Strategic Planning for K-12 Administrators and Teachers

   We are currently recommending that AT LEAST three teachers per elementary school, two teachers per middle school, and one teacher per high school be trained to teach computer science so that schools are adequately prepared to meet the requirements of SEA 172. See below for more information on SEA 172. Contact Jake Koressel, IDOE Computer Science Specialist, with any questions
