I am writing to implore you to maintain the expectation that a financial advisor would have to take the client's interests into account (and NOT his/her profits) when giving investment advice. As a retiree, I must rely upon the hard-earned savings that I have in my investment accounts. I do not have the luxury of losing money to someone who wants to line his/her pockets at my expense. I need to know that I can trust that there are protections in place to prevent abuse of seniors like myself.

Thank you for taking my concerns seriously as they are a major concern for many.
