

Dear Labor Secretary—

I am writing to ask you ~~to~~ please, to not delay, weaken, or rescind the "fiduciary duty" rule that would prevent Wall Street from siphoning off Americans' hard-won savings by hold financial advisers to a "best interest" standard when they provide investment advice on retirement accounts.

This rule is consistent with Pres. Trump's commitment to stand up for middle-class Americans, and industry has had ample time to prepare for it.

I will view any delay or weakening of this rule as a gift to the financial services industry — at the expense of working families like mine who need to make every retirement dollar count. Not a single American voted to make it easier for their financial advisers to cheat them.

Sincerely,

Linnea Hartoufkar
