

Elly Page is a Senior Legal Advisor with International Center for Not-for-Profit Law (ICNL). Her work with ICNL's US Program focuses on protecting the right to peaceful assembly. She founded ICNL's US Protest Law Tracker, which monitors state and federal legislation that limits or chills individuals' right to assemble, and she provides technical assistance to a broad coalition of partners to defend and advance assembly rights. Her work is regularly cited in leading media outlets and she has been quoted in The New York Times, Washington Post, and The Guardian among others. Ms. Page previously served with the Cairo Institute for Human Rights Studies, in Cairo, Egypt, and the Public International Law & Policy Group in Washington, D.C. Ms. Page is a graduate of American University Washington College of Law and Harvard University.