Mr. LOAN submitted the following, which was read:

“To the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War:

“The undersigned, a sub-committee to whom was referred the memorial of Howard T. Combs and others, of Missouri, relating to the arming of the disloyal population, and the return of fugitive slaves, would respectfully

REPORT:

“That he has had the same under consideration, and is satisfied that the following statements are substantially true, to wit:

“The military force used in Missouri for more than a year past consists chiefly of the militia of the State; that this force, prior to the middle of the summer of 1863, consisted of soldiers of undoubted loyalty. Subsequent to that time the Governor of the State, who assumed and exercised an unlimited and arbitrary authority over this force and in directing its organization, by his orders, disbanded the greater part of the loyal militia and disarmed them, and revoked the commissions of their officers. In lieu thereof, he organized, as the militia, returned soldiers from the rebel army, guerillas, bushwhackers, and rebel sympathizers, and placed officers of similar sentiments in command of them, so that the federal military authority in Missouri was under the control and direction of the disloyal sentiment of the State; and under it the loyal people have been compelled to submit to every insult, injury, and wrong that the most fiendish malignity and hate could devise, and the most relentless cruelty inflict. Wilful and deliberate murders have been committed on loyal citizens in the most cowardly and cruel manner.

“The superior officers of the federal troops in the State, in many instances, sympathize with the rebels, especially upon the subject of slavery; and they have directed their policy so as to protect, as far as possible, those entertaining disloyal sentiments. There is reason to believe that they have used the troops under their command to prevent the escape of slaves from their masters, and to return fugitive slaves, in violation of the provisions of acts of Congress, and of the additional articles of war.

“There is reason to believe that they have pursued a systematic course of persecution of the soldiers under their command, who are known to entertain radical sentiments, and by means of packed court-martials have secured convictions upon frivolous charges, upon which unusually severe sentences have been pronounced and confirmed.

“It is believed that such officers have arbitrarily arrested, and confined in the guard house, officers in the federal service who were passing through their jurisdiction with colored recruits, and have taken possession of the recruits and sent them to parts of the State where the sentiment of the citizens was intensely disloyal.

“It is further believed that, for the purpose of oppressing and persecuting loyal citizens, and protecting those who are disloyal from being punished for offences alleged against them, the military authorities in Missouri have instituted military tribunals, commonly called ‘military commissions,’ which would exercise, or decline to exercise, jurisdiction arbitrarily, as would best subserve the objects they have in view. They have also intrusted to the arbitrary discretion of any officer, even one of the lowest grade, if he had command of a separate squad of men, the right to suspend or enforce the writ of habeas corpus.

“In conclusion, it is not improper to say that it is manifest that heretofore the administration of military affairs in Missouri has been so directed as to furnish the most ample protection to the disloyal, and conduce to the destruction of the interest of the loyal citizen in many cases, and to the most relentless and vindictive persecution of his person.

“All of which is respectfully submitted.

“BENJ. F. LOAN.”

Mr. LOAN said that he had in his possession sworn statements of citizens of Missouri to substantiate all, or nearly all, of the assertions made in his report. He believed that the subject was one well worthy investigation by this committee. But he was aware that the state of the public business here was such as might not now justify the sending a sub-committee to Missouri to institute an investigation, and it would be too expensive to call the witnesses to this city. He therefore moved the further consideration of this subject be postponed for the present. Agreed to.

Mr. LOAN also submitted the following preamble and resolution, which were read:

“It appearing, from the evidence before this committee, that Captain William M. Gwynne, 66th Ohio volunteers, provost marshal of the city of Alexandria, Virginia, has seized liquors and other property, which have been condemned by him as forfeited:

“And it further appearing that he has issued part of said property upon requisitions drawn by surgeons at Alexandria and in its vicinity, but not containing any sufficient reasons showing the necessity for the issue of the same, and without approval by any one; and other parts of said property have been turned over to the proper quartermasters, as is alleged, without taking or filing any vouchers which will charge said officers with said property:

“And it further appearing that property, which has been seized and condemned by said officer or forfeited as aforesaid to the government, is disposed of by said provost marshal without any account thereof being made to any disbursing officer of the government, or any charge being made in any way against the said quartermaster or surgeons which would require them to account for the same: therefore,

“Resolved, That, in the opinion of this committee, it is inexpedient to continue as the agents of the government, in important and responsible positions, officers who, from carelessness or ignorance, so entirely neglect the most obvious duties demanded by their positions for the protection of the interests of the government.”

After discussion,

On motion of Mr. JULIAN:

Ordered, That the consideration of the preamble and resolutions be postponed until further testimony upon the subject has been taken by this committee.

On motion of Mr. ODELL,

The committee then proceeded to consider the communication from the War Department, (see Journal, February 10,) requesting the committee “to investigate the operations of the quartermaster’s department in the cities of New York and Philadelphia.”

After discussion,

On motion of Mr. GOOCH,

Ordered, That a sub-committee of three members be appointed to confer with the Secretary of War, and who shall, if they deem it necessary, proceed “to investigate the operations of the quartermaster’s department in the cities of New York and Philadelphia.”

Mr. ODELL moved that any other member or members of this committee who may desire to accompany this sub-committee and take part in this investigation be authorized to do so.

The committee met pursuant to adjournment: present, the chairman, Messrs. Chandler and Loan.

The following witnesses were examined:

General A. P. Howe, (concluded;)

Rear-Admiral J. A. Dahlgren.

The chairman directed the stenographer to enter upon the journal that, having become impressed with the exceeding importance of the testimony taken by the committee in relation to the army of the Potomac, more especially in relation to the incompetency of the general in command of the army, he and Mr. Chandler had believed it to be their duty to call upon the President and the Secretary of War, and lay before them the substance of the testimony taken by them, and, in behalf of the army and of the country, demand the removal of General Meade, and the appointment of some one more competent to command. They accordingly did so yesterday afternoon; and being asked what general they could recommend for the command of the army of the Potomac, they said that for themselves they would be content with General Hooker, believing him to be competent; but not being advocates of any particular general, they would say that if there was any general whom the President considered more competent for the command, then let him be appointed. They stated that Congress had appointed the committee to watch the conduct of the war; and unless this state of things should be soon changed it would become their duty to make the testimony public which they had taken, with such comments as the circumstances of the case seemed to require.

The chairman said he had been informed that General Meade was in town.
