software technology, proven to be invaluable for law enforcement investigations, and a mathematical method, received NASA's Commercial and Government Invention of the Year Awards.

The Video Image Stabilization and Registration System (VISAR) received NASA's Commercial Invention of the Year. The basis for this innovative technology was created by two Marshall Center employees — Dr. David Hathaway, a solar physicist, and Paul Meyer, an atmospheric scientist — to aid their space-program research.

In response to an FBI request for assistance, this video enhancement technology was developed into VISAR. It was first used in 1996 to help the FBI analyze video of the bombing at the he Jacobs Sverdrup group at the Marshall Center was named the 2002 NASA George M. Low Award honoree in the Large Business Services category.

The award was presented recently at the NASA Annual Continual Improvement and Reinvention Conference in Washington.

Jacobs Sverdrup was a finalist for the national Low Award in 2000 and 2001, and has been named the Marshall Center's Contractor Excellence Award winner in this category for the past three years.

The company is the prime contractor on the Engineering, Sciences and Technical Services contract at Marshall and has more than 400 employees working primarily on-site at Marshall. The Jacobs Sverdrup group at Marshall includes subcontractors

Procurement Office holds annual awards celebration

he Marshall Center's Procurement Office recently held its annual awards luncheon to honor employees for outstanding accomplishments in the last year.

This year's award theme was "Procurement turning the Past Into a Vision of the Future." In addition to honoring its employees, special tribute was paid to former NASA astronauts, including Dr. N. Jan Davis, director of the Flight Projects Directorate at the Marshall Center.

Procurement's team members participated in a production showcasing NASA and Marshall history from the 1960s to the present.

Awards were presented in various categories that included the Peer Honor Award — recognizing an individual who has made outstanding contributions to the Procurement Office as recognized by their peers.

Ten of the award winners also were nominated for the annual NASA-wide Procurement awards administered by the Office of Procurement at NASA Headquarters in Washington.

The following team members were recog-

• Simplified Acquisition Specialist of the Year - Dennis Parton.

- The Mid-range/Commercial Person of the Year - Carol Terrell.
  - Grant Specialist of the Year- Andrea Tobias.
  - Procurement Analyst of the Year Jim Young.
- Procurement Support Person of the Year Lynn Doughty.
- Contracting Officer's Technical Representative of the Year -- David McGaha. Receiving honorable mention were Craig McArthur, Mark Fisher and Olympic Summer Games in Atlanta. Since then Hathaway and Meyer have worked on more than a dozen criminal cases with police and the FBI.

VISAR works by turning dark, jittery images captured by home video, security systems and video cameras in police cars, into clearer, stable images that reveal clues about crimes. It does what other image stabilization processes cannot, correct for changes in orientation and size. The system is also being used in the Space Shuttle Columbia Accident Investigation.

The winner of the NASA Government Invention of the Year is a mathematical method called Computer Implemented Empirical Mode Decomposition Method, also known as the Hilbert-Huang Transformation (HHT) Method. Dr. Norden E. Huang, Director, Goddard Institute of Data Analysis at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center, Greenbelt, Md, invented it.

The HHT Method has many diverse applications. The Method can be applied in a variety of fields to study things such as: basic nonlinear mechanics, climate cycles, solar neutrinos variations, earthquake engineering, geophysical exploration, submarine design, structural damage detection, satellite data analysis, nonlinear wave evolution, turbulence flow, blood pressure variations and heart arrhythmia.

This Method is also used to analyze sea surface temperature data collected by NASA satellites and instruments. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration uses Huang's method to analyze images from some of its Earth orbiting spacecraft. It has proven successful in connecting environmental changes to El Nino phenomena with weather changes.

Huang also won NASA's Exceptional Space Act Award in 1999, for which he was cited, "as having invented one of the most important applied mathematical methods in NASA's history," for his invention of the HHT Method.

Allied Aerospace, ERC, Morgan Research, Qualis Corp. and Raytheon. The company has been the prime contractor on this contract at the Marshall Center since 1989.

The George M. Low Award is NASA's oldest and most prestigious Quality and Excellence Award. It is given to contractors who demonstrate an exceptional level of quality, safety, customer satisfaction and technical performance in NASArelated contracts. Each Center submits nominees for the award in several categories. The winner is exempt from future Low Award applications for three years.

"It's a wonderful award to receive," said Lon Miller, general manager of the Jacobs Sverdrup group at Marshall. "This exemplifies the partnership we have with the Marshall Space Flight Center."

The company has won other national NASA awards recently, including the 2001 Goldin-Stokes Mentor Protégé Award for its work with Qualis, a small business subcontractor. This pairing was the first of its kind under the NASA Mentor Protégé Program at Marshall. The Jacobs Sverdrup group at Marshall also was a co-winner of the 2001 NASA Software of the Year Award.

Jacobs Sverdrup, headquartered in Tullahoma, Tenn., is a wholly owned subsidiary of Jacobs Engineering Group in Pasadena, Calif.

Marshall Easter Egg Hunt is Saturday

he Marshall Center's annual Easter Egg Hunt will be Saturday, April 5 at the Marshall Picnic grounds. In case of rain, the hunt will be held inside the Activities Bldg. 4316. Registration begins at 1:30 p.m., with the egg hunt at 2 p.m. for children up to 10 years old.

Employees must register any family members in the Visitor Management System if the family members will not be attending with a badged employee.

To register a non-badged family member, go to http://co.msfc.nasa.gov/ad50/pts/vms.html.

For more information, call Janie Crawford at 544-0514 or Gabrall Yeldell at 544-1382.

NASA, Marshall exhibits help celebrate 'Centennial of Flight'

he U.S. Navy's Blue Angels brought their world-renowned jet demonstration to the Huntsville International airport March 29-30 as part of an air show that also showcased NASA and Marshall exhibits.

Cloudy skies and cold temperatures didn't keep the crowd away, as thousands turned out for the show on both days.

The Marshall Center featured International Space Station and microgravity science exhibits, as well as displays on this year's "Centennial of Flight" celebration.

NASA exhibits included the Johnson Space Center's "Space Station Imagination" comprised of two 48-foot trailers linked to form a mock-up of two modules of the International Space Station.

Obituaries

Oakley S. Anderson, 88, of Southport, Fla., died March 28. Burial was in Greenwood Cemetery in Panama City.

Anderson was born in Southport on Sept. 13, 1914.

He served as petty officer first class in the U.S. Navy during World War II. After the war, he finished his degree in business from Northwestern University in Chicago. He held many positions in private industry before joining NASA at Michoud in New Orleans in 1962 as an accountant. He was transferred to the Marshall Center in 1967, where he worked in the Financial Management Office. He was the widower of Jeanne Anderson. He retired from NASA in 1976, and moved back to Panama City in 1978.

He was active in the National Association of Retired Federal Employees, his church, and other community organizations.

He is survived by his wife, Kay; two sons, Donald C. Anderson of Louisville, Ky., and Jeffrey S. Anderson of Prospect, Tenn.; four grandchildren; and four greatgrandchildren.
