Preface

Within the State and Private Forestry branch of the USDA Forest Service, the Forest Products Conservation and Recycling (FPC&R) staff is a highly specialized group of technical professionals with particular expertise in processing, converting, and adapting forest resources into goods and services. These professionals are also present in other Federal programs such as USDA's Extension programs and the Department of Interior's Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA). However, the largest pool of professionals lies within the State governments for utilization and marketing (U&M) of their forest resources.

Many traditional U&M programs foster resource conservation by helping timber harvesters, manufacturers, and users of forest products to be as efficient and effective as possible. This is done by providing technical assistance and recommendations for improvement. Where warranted, companies are advised to seek the additional services of private sector consultants. In addition to these traditional U&M programs, economic development, small-diameter and underutilized species, recycling, special forest products, and value-added product processing are being emphasized.

It is the mission of the FPC&R Program to Encourage and facilitate conservation of forest resources in their conversion and adaptation to products and services that meet the needs of people and improve their economic well-being.

Our vision is:

FPC&R personnel will serve as a cadre of professionals who encourages ecologically sound forest products utilization practices and seeks to perpetuate healthy, vigorous forests for future generations.

This directory has been assembled and updated by the FPC&R Technology Marketing Unit at the Forest Products Laboratory (FPL) to assist each of us in our networking. Our intent has been to make this document as accurate as possible and we solicit your support in keeping it up to date. A copy will be available online via FPL's website (<http://www.fpl.fs.fed.us/>) under the category "Other Resources." We will periodically update the online copy, so please notify us of any changes that need to be made. We look forward to working with each of you in your forest products conservation and recycling efforts.

The Forest Products Conservation & Recycling (FPC&R) Technology Marketing Unit (TMU) is a State & Private Forestry office assigned to the Forest Products Laboratory, Madison, WI.

The TMU provides for marketing the Forest Service's technology and research capabilities to field personnel who, in turn, provide support to forest products practitioners. The TMU works in collaboration with industries. We support the national and international research mission of the Forest Service in forest products utilization by ensuring ready adoption of wood-based material technologies developed at the Forest Products Laboratory and other Forest Service research installations. Scope of the Forest Products Technology Marketing Program includes harvesting, manufacturing, marketing, conservation, engineering, and recycling of forest-based products.

Objectives:

- Maintain a network of private and governmental forest products technology utilization specialists as a vehicle for disseminating research information, to obtain input on resource utilization needs, and to promote dialogue between user and researcher.
- Extend the wood resource through implementation of new technologies for efficient use of wood- and fiber-based materials.
- Form partnerships and coordinate technology transfer programs to pilot forest products technology adoption.
- Provide consultative support for licensing and commercialization of FS inventions with significant resource implications.
- Communicate needs for new technology by private industry, landowners, and other governmental units to research units for their use in establishing research directions.
