The Social Security Administration uses the information you furnish to determine the effect of your worker's compensation or other public disability benefit on your Social Security disability insurance benefits, as provided in section 224 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 424). We may also use the information you give us when we match records by computer. Matching programs compare our records with those of other Federal, State, or local government agencies. Many agencies may use matching programs to find or prove that a person qualifies for benefits paid by the Federal government. The law allows us to do this even if you do not agree to it.

These and other reasons why information about you may be used or given out are explained in the Federal Register. If you want to learn more about this, contact any Social Security Office.
