

To whom it may concern:

I firmly agree with Static Control's argument. Although I find it somewhat funny to make specific exceptions, I think something needs to be done in the ink jet toner industry in general. What really needs to take place is a trial against all of the main inkjet printer companies for price fixing. The prices they charge are absolutely ridiculous, which drives people to do business with these other "illegal" (according to the stupid, dumb, piece of crap DMCA) cartridge makers.
