1. INTRODUCTION AND SCOPE

This document is intended to assist those who teach weather and climate at any level from pre-school through introductory college level courses, by listing some of the available instructional resources.

While an effort was made to select easily obtainable materials, some materials may not be available everywhere or may have become obsolete. This list is for informational purposes only and inclusion of an item on the list by no means represents an endorsement of that product. Some good source materials may have been neglected inadvertently.

Permission is hereby granted for the reproduction of portions or all of this document for non-commercial educational use in schools on the condition that this source is acknowledged.

This information is also available on the web at <http://www.nssl.noaa.gov/resources/>

2. CAREER GUIDANCE MATERIAL

The American Meteorological Society (AMS) provides career guidance information to individuals contemplating a career in the atmospheric and oceanic sciences. Many of these materials are also available from the University Corporation for Atmospheric Research (UCAR). School counselors should be made aware of these materials.

AMS on web: www.ametsoc.org

UCAR on web: www.ucar.edu/edu/

- A Career Guide for the Atmospheric Sciences

Updated in 2000, the guide describes the nature of the atmospheric sciences and career opportunities. Single copies free.

Online at www.ametsoc.org/AMS/AtmosCareers/

- The Changing Atmosphere - Challenges and Opportunities

American Meteorological Society (AMS) and University Corporation for Atmospheric Research (UCAR), 24 pp. Single copies free.

- 1998 Curricula in the Atmospheric, Oceanic, Hydrologic, and Related Sciences

This book is published jointly by the American Meteorological Society (AMS) and University Corporation for Atmospheric Research (UCAR). It lists accredited institutions in the U.S. and Canada which have academic programs granting degrees from the bachelor to doctoral level. It also includes departments, course names, faculty members, and thesis titles. Order from the AMS ($40 includes shipping and handling).

- How to Be a Meteorologist

World Meteorological Organization (WMO), WMO #257, 16 pp. A career pamphlet. Single copies $5.00. www.wmo.ch.

The AMS sponsors several undergraduate awards and scholarships in the atmospheric sciences. Check the Bulletin of the American Meteorological Society for eligibility criteria, or contact the AMS for information and application forms at:

•Project Atmosphere

Project Atmosphere is an educational initiative of the AMS, designed to foster improved atmospheric education in grades K-12. A partnership of scientists, educators, government, and industry focuses on attracting students into continued study of science, mathematics, and technology. One of the features of Project Atmosphere has been the formation of the Atmospheric Education Resource Agent (AERA) network. At least one master teacher in each state has been selected to act as a resource agent. A current listing can be obtained from:

Ira Geer
American Meteorological Society

Weather Radar: Detecting Precipitation

Water Vapor and the Water Cycle

Global Climates

Hazardous Weather

Radar Reflections: Soul of a Storm - Video (24 minutes).

•DataStreme

This major precollege teacher enhancement initiative involves a 13-week distance learning course, with the goal of training Weather Education Resource Teachers. Interested teachers should apply for selection as participants for either the spring or fall semesters. Participants must be pre-college teaching professionals who live near an area served by a Local Implementation Team, a cadre of professional meteorologists or master teachers who have participated in Project Atmosphere training. Selected participants receive graduate-level academic credit for the course on the study of the atmospheric environment through the use of electronically-transmitted weather data and learning materials, combined with Study Guide readings and investigations.

American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS)

AAAS is actively involved with all aspects of science, mathematics, and technology education. Position papers, reference, resource, and review materials have been produced to assist teachers at all grade levels and in many academic disciplines.

Independent Study Courses

Several institutions offer independent study or correspondence courses in atmospheric and oceanic sciences. The introductory general-education courses have few prerequisites, and provide an opportunity for people to broaden their weather knowledge who do not have an opportunity to attend more traditional college-level courses. A listing of such courses is in the atmospheric sciences section of the index in:

National University Continuing Education Association, 1992: The independent study catalog: A guide to continuing education through correspondence courses. Fifth Edition, One Dupont Circle, Washington, DC, 281 pp. ISBN 1-56079-138-1.

Participating institutions include:

Ball State University, Muncie, IN 47306
Indiana University, Bloomington 47405
Oklahoma State University, Stillwater 74078
Pennsylvania State University, Univ. Park 16802
Portland State University, Portland, OR 97207
University of Arizona, Tucson 85719
University of Georgia, Athens 30602
University of Kansas, Lawrence 66045-2602

University of Wisconsin-Extension, Madison 53706
Weber State College, Ogden, UT 84408-4005.

National Center for Atmospheric Research (NCAR)

NCAR, with the support of the National Science Foundation, is actively involved with several educational projects. NCAR is part of a larger organization, the University Corporation for Atmospheric Research (UCAR). The NCAR and UCAR web address is www.ucar.edu.

•COMET

The Cooperative Program for Operational Meteorology, Education, and Training (COMET), is administered by UCAR and sponsored by the National Weather Service. COMET includes the development of computer-based learning modules through its Distance Learning Program. The computer-based training modules come in a variety of formats including laser disc, CD, and web training modules. A complete list can be found at: www.comet.ucar.edu/modules/. Order online (www.comet.ucar.edu/sales/) or contact Liz Lessard at 303-497-8475 or write care of UCAR/COMET, P.O. Box 3000, Boulder, CO 80307.

•NCAR Global Change Instruction Program

Modules have been developed by the NCAR Advanced Study Program for college-level interdisciplinary studies of global climatic change, and earth and environmental sciences. They cover earth science to include meteorology, and are for undergraduate non-science majors.

National Earth Science Teachers Association (NESTA)

NESTA is a nonprofit educational organization whose purpose is the advancement, stimulation, extension, improvement, and coordination of earth science education at all educational levels.

NESTA Membership ($15.00)
P.O. Box 53213
Washington, DC 20009-3213

NESTA publishes The Earth Scientist four times a year. Each issue specializes in geology, astronomy, meteorology, or oceanography. It is edited by:

Jan Woerner
35201 Hollow Creek Drive
Yucaipa, CA 92399-5905

Many states also have both NSTA and NESTA organizations, and have publications. Contact NSTA or state education departments for more information.

National Science Teachers Association (NSTA)

NSTA is a professional organization of science teachers. In addition to the periodicals in Section 5, NSTA materials include NSTA's Supplement of Science Education Suppliers, which has addresses of audiovisual producers, publishers, and science equipment suppliers.

1742 Connecticut Ave., N.W.
Washington, DC 20209-1171

National Weather Association (NWA)

NWA is a nonprofit organization chartered to promote the interests of weather forecasting. The NWA annually awards Sol Hirsch Educational Grants to K-12 teachers to improve the education of students in meteorology. Information about the application process is at:

6704 Wolke Court
Montgomery, AL 36116-2134
Phone: (334) 213-0388
Email: NatWeaAsoc@aol.com

Other Federal Agencies

Several Federal agencies have established education programs which provide teachers with resource materials in the form of audiovisual aids, lesson plans, activity booklets, and worksheets. Typically, these materials can be obtained at nominal cost from resource centers which may also produce newsletters or other information. Agencies with weather-related material are:

- Department of Agriculture
Global Change Programs Office, Room 60 LL
1621 North Kent Street
Arlington, VA 22209
Phone: (703) 235-9018
Fax: (703) 235-9046

- NASA
The NASA Educational Affairs Division has established a NASA Teacher Resource Center Network comprised of:
Teacher Resource Centers (TRCs).
Regional Teacher Resource Centers (RTRCs).
Central Operation of Resources for Educators (CORE).
Additional NASA education resources:
NASA Space Link.
NASA Select Television.
NASA Education Satellite Videoconferences.

4. AUDIOVISUAL MATERIALS

Weather and climate concepts can be presented effectively using visuals in many different formats, such as videos, slides, and posters. Examples of atmospheric phenomena reinforce the learning process.

Selected address lists of audio-visual suppliers can be found in the annual issue of the National Science Teachers Association's (NSTA) Science Education Suppliers Supplement, a supplement to The Science Teacher and other NSTA publications. For information, contact the NSTA at 1840 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, VA 22201-3000.

Other indexes and reference sources of educational audio-visual materials include several indexes published by the National Information Center for Educational Media (NICEM):

- Film and video finder, 1991, Third edition, Medford, NJ, 3 volumes. ISBN 0-937458-20-0.
- Audiocassette and compact disc finder, 1993, Third edition, Medford, NJ, 1419 pp. ISBN 0-937458-22-7.

5. PRINTED MATERIALS

A limited number of popular weather and climate books are usually available at local bookstores. Many textbooks can be ordered and purchased from bookstores catering to colleges. University and public libraries have numerous popular meteorology books and periodicals. Participating libraries within the Federal Depository system are sources of numerous weather-related government publications and climatological data.

Weatherwise magazine has many interesting articles and features. Pertinent articles also appear in The Physics Teacher, The Science Teacher, The Earth Scientist, Science Scope, and Science and Children. These articles contain useful information for demonstration, experiments, and other learning experiences for preschool through college. Science and Children contains a section "Geography and Weather" by H.M. Mogil and H.T. Collins. Reviews of pertinent books appear in Science Books and Films under "Earth Science."

5.1. GENERAL INTEREST - Adult Level

The following books target the adult non-technical reader and would not necessarily be considered textbooks. These general interest books may either focus on one area in the atmospheric sciences, or they may be sufficiently broad, and explain weather phenomena. Some books document interesting historical weather events or the history of meteorology. Many are attractive books, and contain photographs, diagrams, and other visual features.

5.9. INSTRUCTIONAL PERIODICALS

Several publications from educational organizations occasionally contain weather- information directed toward the classroom teacher. They include articles, lab or demonstration hints, and book and software reviews.

•Earth Notes

Published quarterly for educators for Grades K-6. Provides a forum for the exchange of ideas in elementary-level environmental education.
Environmental Protection Agency, Public Information Center, 401 M Street, S.W., Washington, DC 20460.
Phone: (202) 290-7751

•The Earth Scientist

The National Earth Science Teachers Association (NESTA) publishes The Earth Scientist 4 times a year. Each issue specializes in geology, astronomy, meteorology, or oceanography. Recent weather articles of 4 to 8 pages in length were on the topics of lightning, lightning safety, heat waves, microbursts, weather forecast terms, mesoscale convective systems, supercell thunderstorms, multiple-vortex tornadoes, lightning, sprites, and hail.

Jan Woerner, Editor, 35201 Hollow Creek Drive, Yucaipa, CA 92399-5905

•National Science Teachers Association (NSTA)

The national professional organization of science teachers publishes a series of periodicals for teachers.

5.10. WEATHER ALMANACS AND CALENDARS

Almanacs and calendars containing weather and climate information can be informative and stimulate interest in weather. Some calendars are distributed nationally and usually provide listings of significant weather events that have occurred in various areas of the country. National weather statistics and topics are given in capsulated form. Calendars distributed locally may have more daily information pertinent to the region, such as daily records or extreme temperatures, precipitation, and sunrise and sunset times. A complete listing of these local weather calendars is not provided.

•Accord Calendars (2000)

6. INSTRUMENTS AND OTHER EQUIPMENT

Since meteorology is an observational science, instruments play an important role in gathering information about the atmosphere. Weather stations can be built and outfitted with weather instruments, but they typically are expensive, so price comparisons should be made prior to purchase. Catalogues and price lists may be obtained from reputable scientific supply houses. Selected updated address lists of suppliers of scientific and instructional equipment can be found in the annual issue of the Science Education Suppliers Supplement and other publications from the National Science Teachers Association (NSTA):

1742 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 20009-1171.

Phone: (202) 328-5800

Before purchasing weather instruments, the following references should be read:

6.1. WEATHER KITS

To aid teachers with limited experience in weather instrumentation, several supply companies package sets of instruments and other instruction materials which can be used as a self-contained kit for weather study. Some teachers create their own weather kits from an assortment of materials, or augment the kits with additional instruments.

Suggested components for a weather kit are a thermometer, maximum/minimum thermometer, soil thermometer, anemometer, rain gauge, sling psychrometer, radio-meter, sundial, barometer, barographs, and thermograph. Other desirable features include an atmosphere chart, a good book, weather log, and five-day weather watch.

•Beginner's Pack

Barometer, maximum/minimum thermometer, radio-meter, rain gauge, wind meter, cloud chart, weather guide, and weather log. $88.00 plus $5.50 shipping.

•Box Topics: Storms and Weather Forecasting

Pullouts, flip cards, stickers, and activity book. $34.95.

1997, Briarpatch, P.O. Box 604, Short Hills, NJ 07079.

•Children's Pack

Five-day weather watcher, radiometer, sundial, cloud chart, tornado tube, weather information cloud chart, and weather activity book. $25.00 plus $5.00 shipping.

Wind and Weather, The Albion Street Water Tower, P.O. Box 2320, Mendocino, CA 95460.

Phone: (800) 922-9463

•Storm Watch

Book and air balance forecasting station. $14.95.

•Water Watch Kit

Book, rain gauge, and acid rain test kit. $14.95.

•Weather Guide Photo Anthology I & II

Postcard collection of photos from Weather Guide Calendars. $6.95 for both volumes.

Accord Publishing Ltd., 1407 Larimer Square, Suite 206, Denver, CO 80202-1723

Phone: (303) 595-3839

•Weather Watcher Kit

Maximum/minimum thermometer, 2-inch rain gauge, and handbooks. $16.90.

6.2. WEATHER INSTRUMENT & SCIENCE EQUIPMENT SUPPLIERS

Several companies only supply weather instruments for professional purposes or the serious amateur. Usually, instruments obtained from these supply houses are of high quality and may be expensive. Other companies have instruments for a range of disciplines and educational institutions. They stock some instruments for the home and school. These instruments usually suffice for beginners and the more casual weather observer. In addition, some suppliers have instructional materials, as in other sections of this publication. Companies usually will furnish catalogs on request. Some models and teaching aids are also offered.

7. COMPUTER/INTERNET

7.1. WEATHER AND CLIMATE ON THE WEB

Current weather data can be obtained on the web. Electronic media are rapidly expanding and changing, so keeping track of updates and address changes for favorite weather web sites is suggested. Since the income of many providers comes from the timeliness of the information, time lags are introduced before data access is opened to the public. These delays may range from 15 minutes to an hour or more until the information is considered too old to be of commercial value. While this list is not exhaustive, most addresses link to related sites.

7.2. DATA SETS ON ELECTRONIC MEDIA

Large amounts of weather and climate data can be stored on DC-ROM disks. For example, one CD-ROM produced by the National Climatic Data Center (NCDC) holds climate data for over 6000 stations, which is equivalent to 250,000 pages of printed text. Graphics packages and the driving software are included with some disks. Data exports are available so that the user can export the data from the disk to produce individual usable files on diskettes. Articles describing meteorological data storage are the following:

Mass, C.F., H.J. Edmon, H.J. Friedman, N.R. Cheney, and E.E. Recker, 1987: The use of compact discs for the storage of large meteorological and oceanographic datasets. Bulletin of the American Meteorological Society, 68, 1556-1558.

Mass, C.F., 1993: The application of compact discs (CD-ROM) to the atmospheric sciences and related fields: An update. Bulletin of the American Meteorological Society, 68, 1556-1558.

Ross, T.F., 1994: NCDC's CD-ROM products and on-line services. Preprints of the Third Symposium on Education, Nashville, TN, American Meteorological Society, Boston, J1-J4.

Towheed, S.S., 1993: NASA space and earth science data on CD-ROM. NSSDC WDC-A-R&S 93-01, National Space Science Data Center, Greenbelt, MD, 29 pp.

•International Station Meteorological Climate Summary
Contains climatic data for 640 and 5800 secondary stations worldwide. Version 2.0 issued in June 1992.

•Marine Climatic Atlas of the World
Contains global historical marine data. Included are air and sea temperature, wind speed, sea-level pressure, wave height, gale winds, superstructure icing, and wind/current roses.

•National Climate Information Disk
Version 1.0 contains monthly temperature, precipitation, and Palmer drought index data for the 344 climatological divisions of the U.S. covering 1895-1989.

8. DATA SOURCES

Weather observations at numerous stations can be accessed nearly realtime with a computer and modem. Other weather data sources include radio and television broadcasts. Some climatological data can be obtained in electronic format, such as computer files or databases on diskette, tape, or CD-ROM; much of this is not free.

8.1. CURRENT WEATHER INFORMATION

Current weather observations from weather observation stations operated by the National Weather Service can be obtained from several sources that do not require computers. The following list includes media involved with dissemination of current weather information, forecasts, and special weather advisories, watches, and warnings.

•Hurricane Hotline

Recorded telephone messages are activated when a tropical storm or hurricane threatens. These messages identify areas affected by the watch or warning, location of the storm, forecasted movement, wind speeds, and tidal effects. There is a cost of 50 cents for the first minute, and 45 cents for each additional minute. The average call costs 85 cents.

Atlantic: (900) 410-NOAA or (900) 410-6622.

Pacific: (900) 410-CANE or (900) 410-2263.

•Marine Weather Radio

Weather observations, charts, warnings, advisories, and other information are broadcast on various marine weather radio frequencies for shipping interests. Stations operated by NOAA are part of an international network of marine weather radio stations. For marine interests, phone service is operated by BOAT/U.S. Weather Watch at (900) 933-BOAT--this is a toll call. A list of stations and frequencies operated on the Atlantic, Pacific, Gulf of Mexico, and Great Lakes is provided in a publication available from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, DC 20418.

Essentially all meteorological data collected in the United States are archived by the National Climatic Data Center (NCDC), an agency of NOAA in Asheville, NC. Climatic data can be obtained from governmental sources, either through publications in libraries or certain government offices.

•NOAA Weather Radio

The expanded NOAA Weather Radio network of over 425 FM stations is operated by the National Weather Service (NWS) and provides continuous weather information. Stations operate at seven high FM-band frequencies:

162.400 Mhz	162.425 Mhz
162.450 Mhz	162.475 Mhz
162.500 Mhz	162.525 Mhz
162.550 Mhz	161.650 Mhz
161.775 Mhz	163.275 Mhz

NOAA Weather Radio broadcasts are also available from touch-tone telephones; select a local broadcast at:

(900) 884-NOAA

(900) 884-6622

Call (800) 662-6622 toll free for further information.

A listing of NOAA Weather Radio stations in the U.S. can be obtained from:

-Local National Weather Service offices.

-Customer Service, National Weather Service, NOAA, 1325 East-West Highway, Room 14360, Silver Spring, MD 20910. Phone (301) 713-0090.

-Web: www.nws.noaa.gov/nwr/nwr.htm

•The Weather Channel

This cable television channel continuously broadcasts weather programming from Atlanta, Ga. An educational segment entitled 'The Weather Classroom' is broadcast daily, and covers a wide variety of topics. Teachers may videotape this segment at no charge for use in their classrooms.

8.2. CLIMATOLOGICAL INFORMATION

•Canada

Canadian climate data can be obtained from two sources:

10. ADDITIONAL RESOURCE CONTACTS

American Meteorological Society AERAs

The American Meteorological Society (AMS) established a national network of teachers identified as Atmospheric Education Resource Agents (AERA). A partnership of scientists, educators, government, and industry focuses on attracting young students into continued study of science, mathematics, and technology. At least one master teacher in each state has been selected to act as a resource agent. A current listing can be obtained from:

Powers of Nature Exhibit

Powers of Nature travels to large museums during its tour over the next several years. It has realtime data, and many portions that are interactive. While the exhibit includes earthquakes and volcanoes, the largest portion is on weather. This traveling exhibit was produced by the Franklin Institute. The following is the remaining schedule of openings:

- October 2000
Museum of Science Boston
- April 2001
Museum of Science and Industry Chicago
