“Phishing” scams target military credit card holders

Special Agent Daniel Dahl
Air Force Office of Special Investigations, Andrews AFB, Md.

Recently, several suspicious email messages have been forwarded to the Fraud Operations office, HQ AFOSI. The messages appear to come from a legitimate company and inform the recipient their account (credit card, debit card, checking, etc.) may have been compromised.

The recipient is directed to click on a link and then enter personal and account information in order to verify their account. This is known as a “phishing” scam and both the original email and the link are fakes. Some of these scams appear to target holders of the Government Purchase Card (GPC) and/or the Government Travel Card (GTC).

If you believe you’ve been scammed, file your complaint with the Federal Trade Commission at www.ftc.gov, and then visit the FTC’s Identity Theft Web site at www.consumer.gov/idtheft to learn how to minimize your risk of damage from ID theft.

Dedication, excellence are commonplace here

By Col. Joseph McCourt
301st Maintenance Group
Commander

Last month I had the honor of becoming the 301st Maintenance Group commander, and like most of you, hit the ground running. To say this job is a dream come true for a maintenance officer would be an understatement. Perhaps more significantly, I marvel at the opportunity to do so at one of the most well-respected, premier fighter wings in the world. The rich history and accomplishments of this wing and the caliber of its people speak of the reputation you have so aptly earned.

As a traditional reservist commuting from out of state, I know well the struggles faced on a daily basis with trying to balance civilian employment with our military careers, and of course the very important third piece of the puzzle, family. I have had the opportunity to serve in the Army National Guard, Air National Guard and, for the last 13 years after finally "seeing the light," with the Air Force Reserve. Each service had its individual demands and requirements.

Combined with a busy home life, with kids in school and a wife who also works outside of the home, it often created quite a juggling act; one I know you all deal with as well. Some don't understand why we continue to serve and stay committed to the Air Force

Reserve. For me, there remains no question. Brig. Gen. Neil Rohan, 301st FW commander, has handed this command over to another enthusiastic officer, and I will let neither him nor you, the members of the 301st Fighter Wing, down.

Over my career I have had the privilege of working very closely with many great and talented officers and NCOs, alike; most recently here at 10th Air Force headquarters and, previously to that, the 944th Fighter Wing at Luke AFB, Ariz.. My hope is that my experiences over the years will enable me to bring another perspective to this maintenance group.

I come to this new position, like we all do, with many ideas and goals for the MXG. Having now spent a few days with both the outstanding Air Reserve Technicians and traditional reservists of this group, I am convinced they are even more talented and motivated than I had heard. I know the great men and women of this command will continue to perform with a dedication and excellence that fully justifies the great trust and confidence that this country places in them.

I am clearly not put in this position to fix anything, for the group is not broken. As I see it, my challenge is to supply the resources and direction needed to allow this highly-tuned machine to continue to operate at the level of expertise and professionalism with which it has become accustomed.

The reserve component has been tasked in recent years like never before. We have answered our nation's call with unprecedented volunteerism as we are readily aware the duty to defend freedom falls to all of us.

This coming year will be no different, bringing additional challenges — a Maintenance Standardization Evaluation Program inspection, unit deployments and most importantly a rainbow Aerospace Expeditionary Forces deployment with our sister F-16 units. The demands will continue to be rigorous, but after witnessing your professionalism and dedication firsthand, I know you are all up to the challenge.

As your newest commander, I look forward to getting to know all of you and working not only with MXG but other members throughout this superb wing.

Get involved

Giving of yourself, time well spent

By Chief Master Sgt. Bradley Scott

301st Command Master Chief

Recently, I attended one of our local military support organizations' monthly meetings.

In the room were four military retirees, one wife of a retiree, one member of the base honor guard and myself. As I listened to the business of the organization my mind kept wandering back to the idea of "service before self."

In that room was this group of people who had served our Air Force faithfully during their military careers and had continued that service far beyond their enlistments. Every month they/we meet, discuss the business of the organization, and try to plan for improving the conditions and quality of the service the group can provide for wing members and our neighbor wing, the 136th Airlift Wing. Every month we discuss ways to rejuvenate the life back into the organization. Frankly speaking, it sometimes seems like I'm watching a fish out of water, flipping and flopping to get back into a stream. Like most collective group efforts, it's a hand full of individuals who carry the burden for the larger group.

As we reach the last quarter of this calendar year, I ask each of you to look within. Are you giving anything back to your community? Are you involved in anything outside of your work and home life that improves the quality of life for others? Are you supporting the organizations that work so hard to support you as a military member?

As an NCO or SNCO are you living up to the responsibilities you accepted when you took on the honor of those stripes you wear?

The Honor Guard is just one of the many 301st Fighter Wing groups to get involved in. Master Sgt. Ross Wood, Honor Guard superintendent, recently advertised positions available in this group. For details on how you can join the 301st honor guard, call Sergeant Wood at 817.782.3849. (Photo by Tech. Sgt. Julie Briden-Garcia, Public Affairs.)

As an NCO or SNCO, are you "joining and supporting local and national professional enlisted organizations" as required by AFI 36-2618, The Enlisted Force Structure? The attendance at that one meeting would indicate there is work to be done in this area by our members.

A few misconceptions may exist with these organizations. One of those being they are "retiree" organizations. This is completely untrue; in fact some of the most vibrant local groups exist around active duty bases where the membership is high with active duty members. Retirees are part of the organization and mesh with and mentor the active duty members.

Another misconception is that officers are excluded from belonging to enlisted organizations. Again, this is untrue. Officers are welcome to be members in all known enlisted support organizations.

I encourage you all to self-assess and see where you can donate a portion of time, a little bit of your talent to support those groups that can benefit from your charity. It's more than paying your annual dues and being counted on the roll. It's not something you do for yourself alone but those who come behind you. It's about "service before self."

Please take the time to get involved. You can make a difference with any effort you offer.

Leadership and Safety

Where rubber meets road

Master Sgt. Douglas Quiroga

301st Weapons and Explosive Safety Office

Sparta's King Leonidas stood firm at the front line among his 300 warriors. Sword at the ready, indomitable in his will to stop and destroy the Persian horde facing them at the narrow pass of Thermopylae.

The Spartan warriors who followed him did so because Leonidas was a king that led by example. He did not demand from his warriors any more or less than what he demanded of himself. History tells the story.

The immortal 300 Spartans and their king will forever live in the memory of mankind as the greatest example of uncompromising conviction, as the greatest example of the will to prevail against overwhelming odds, and as a perpetual reminder of the meaning of the words "live free or die"

What kind of leader are you? Do you lead by mandate or do you lead by example? Do you demand a 100 percent performance from the personnel under your authority based solely on the rank on your shoulders or the chevrons on your sleeves? Have you earned the respect and confidence of those you lead? Can you imagine an Army or Marine platoon leader in the heat of combat, leading men whose respect and trust he has not earned?

It is truly doubtful we, in the Air Force, will ever have to charge an enemy's machine gun nest, or trek 20 miles through inhospitable terrain carrying a 100-pound back pack to engage a fanatical enemy bent on destroying us to the last man. There is no room for "iffy" leadership in those kinds of situations.

Alas! Our mission is much more relaxed but not less important. And it demands the same kind of leadership.

Accomplishing our mission requires leadership based on trust and earned respect. Our missions are accomplished on a highly technical environment, devoid of the mud, dirt and blood of a ground battlefield. Nevertheless, it requires we follow leaders who lead by example and who appreciate and respect the knowledge and abilities of the men they lead; leaders who demand the best because, at any time, that is precisely what they have to give.

So, on a range from inspiring to despicable, where does your effective leadership style fall? What image do you project, and what message do you convey to the working hands that get the task accomplished?

The Commander's Safety Program can only be successful when each and every leader firmly believes in this program. Furthermore, it must be supported by 'lead by example' leadership.

It can not be successful if personnel sense the leaders only pay lip service to safety while emphasizing the important thing is to get the job done. The important thing is to get the job done safely.

The Commander's Safety Program exists to ensure the preservation of indispensable personnel and equipment, without which, the mission cannot be accomplished.

In the ultimate analysis, our readiness and effectiveness depends on the success of a properly implemented and supported Commander's Safety Program.

Keep your holidays safe with fire prevention

Calvin R. Mullinax

Base Fire Prevention Inspector

In 2001, according to the National Fire Protection Association, 3,100 Americans were killed and another 15,200 were injured as a result of fire. Direct property loss due to fires was estimated at $5.5 billion. Fire killed more Americans than all natural disasters combined. 85% of all fire deaths occurred in residences.

With these startling statistics in mind, here are some safety tips:

Smoke Detectors

Smoke is responsible for three out of four deaths.

- ✓ Install smoke detectors on every level of your home and outside of sleeping areas.
- ✓ Test every detector at least once a month. [See your instruction book for the location of the test button.]
- ✓ Keep smoke detectors dust free. Replace batteries with new ones at least once a year, or sooner if the detector makes a chirping sound.

chirping sound.

- ✓ If you have a smoke detector directly wired into your electrical system, be sure that the little signal light is blinking periodically. This tells you that the alarm is active.
- ✓ Inexpensive smoke detectors are available for the hearing impaired.

Fire Extinguishers

They remain your best bet if you're on the spot when a fire begins.

- ✓ Fire extinguishers should be mounted in the kitchen, garage, and workshop.

✓ Purchase an ABC type extinguisher for extinguishing all types of fires.

✓ Learn how to use your fire extinguisher before there is an emergency.

✓ Remember, use an extinguisher on small fires only. If there is a large fire, get out immediately and call 911 from another location.

Right to vote gives freedom a chance

By Chaplain (Capt.) Mark McDaniel
301st Fighter Wing Senior Chaplain

This coming Nov. 2, Americans will once again go to the polls to elect the next president of the United States, senators, governors, representatives, local bond issues, etc. Sadly, once again, only 40-50 percent of registered voters will actually show up and cast their vote.

The tragedy is this election is the most crucial election in our nation's history in a number of ways. First and foremost is the course the Global War on Terror will take after the next inaugural.

It is imperative for all of us, especially military members, to understand the perspective each of the three presidential candidates bring to this third World War. Our nation has taken two visible steps in this campaign against the evil and tyranny of our time and has many more steps to take before this crisis is over.

Secondly, a number of United States Supreme Court Justices will be retiring from the bench within the next four years. The next President will have a tremendous influence upon Court decisions for the next twenty five years. Therefore it's important to understand the candidates' positions on the many cultural issues which our nation faces.

I believe the right to vote is a deeply spiritual act and requires our utmost attention and participation. I believe God has granted the freedoms which we enjoy and pass on to subsequent generations. To choose to not vote in national and local elections betrays that gracious gift. There are many in the world who don't share this gift. It would be tragic if the new governmental elections in Iraq and Afghanistan yield a higher percentage of voter turn-out than the nation which created the conditions for them to have their elections.

I want to challenge all of you to participate and vote. For those who cast their vote, I also want to challenge you to say a prayer for the forthcoming elections in Iraq and Afghanistan in hopes they will go as peacefully and smoothly as ours and that our elected leaders will bring freedom to all of the citizens of their respective countries and, ultimately, the world.

Some Airmen can carry over 'use or lose' leave

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFPN) — Active-duty Airmen who were unable to take leave because they supported contingency operations may be allowed to accumulate more than the normal 60 days after the fiscal year ends.

Those affected can retain up to 120 days of leave until Sept. 30, 2005, said Air Force Personnel Center officials here.

"This program is meant to enable people to take leave they've earned," said Senior Master Sgt. Don Taylor, the center's customer support operations superintendent.

The carry-over leave must be taken in 2005 so Airmen do not lose leave next year, he said.

301st Combat Dining-In approaches

The first Combat Dining-In is scheduled for November 6, in the 301st Fighter Wing maintenance hangar, Bldg. 1643.

Social hour starts at 4:30 p.m. with scheduled events running from 5:30 to 8 p.m. Everyone participating must wear only authorized uniforms: flight suits, BDU, or DCUs. Additional recommended items are eye protection, camouflage face paint, squirt gun and dog tags. You may want to wear an older uniform to keep from damaging a usable one.

For more information, contact your squadron's WAC member or your unit's First Sergeant.
