SPECIAL BIBLIOGRAPHY SERIES

The Special Bibliography Series provides students, faculty, analysts, and area specialists with comprehensive subject coverage of major topics and geographical areas addressed in the curricula and research programs of the Air University. Compiled and edited by the staff of the Air University Library, each bibliography reflects selected book holdings (including GPO publications); periodical articles; and military and defense document holdings present in the library's collection. The series began in 1953. Since that time, over 1500 individual titles have been published.

This special bibliography on the Roles and Missions of the Armed Forces was compiled by Melrose M. Bryant, retired bibliographer, and edited by Stephen Chun, bibliographic liaison to the College for Aerospace Doctrine, Research and Education.

According to Gen Mike Loh, Commander of the USAF Air Combat Command: "One of our goals is to try not to be involved in close air support, to try and do a better job a little deeper so that you can, with airborne battlefield surveillance and other equipment, avoid direct contact with the forward line of troops, and relieve to a great extent the army's direct contact. That's where we can make a tremendous contribution."

"Almost forgotten in this great public imbroglio (gays in the military) that same January is the fact that General Powell also issued a watered-down roles and missions report to the Congress after a public call for study and change by Senator Sam Nunn. Under Goldwater-Nichols, the Chairman must periodically study the services (and report to Congress), and perhaps revise their relative roles and missions. These are enormously sensitive issues, for roles and missions mean money and forces. Apparently Powell was more willing to battle the new President over homosexuals and ignore the Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee on roles and missions, rather than confront the service chiefs, for he allowed them to delete the most meaningful proposals for change."

“...we must rethink our positions on the role of airpower in modern war, for Desert Storm suggests that a new world situation has combined with new technologies to usher in a new era of warfare. As we have seen, our traditional understanding of interdiction is becoming increasingly outmoded. It is time to revisit some basic premises and realize that future battles in the conventional realm will likely be fast-paced, fluid, and deadly. The dominance of maneuver and firepower means that airpower will at times support surface forces. But because of airpower's superior speed and firepower, surface forces will at other times support the dominant air effort by seizing and holding airfields, suppressing enemy air defenses, or making the enemy vulnerable to air attack by flushing him from prepared positions.”

Swanberg, Arnold. How Much Is Enough? Flightline No.4:4-8 Spring-Summer '94.

“Perhaps one reason for the Navy's dominance in the 1993 plan (as they did in the 1933 plan) has been the influence of strategic military writers like Admiral Mahan on defense planning. But Admiral Mahan's Influence of Seapower on History was written at the beginning of this century and certainly well before the rise of stealth aircraft and strategic uses of airpower. There is no comparable airpower treatise currently available on the use of airpower in history, certainly none that would support a larger role of the Air Force.”

Szafranski, Richard, Col, USAF. Annulling Marriages: Reframing the Roles, Missions, and Functions Debate. Airpower Journal 7:55-67 Winter '93.

“Aviation, air power, and aerospace operations are at the heart of the present roles, missions, and functions debate. ...the Air Force has organized, trained, and equipped itself to be the leading force in both air and space. The truth is that the Air Force intends that leadership to continue.”

"Naval aviation's shortcomings during Desert Storm were largely the result of choices in doctrine, training, equipment, and munitions made during the Cold War. The Navy's performance suffered in comparison to the Air Force's, whose Cold War vision was easily and successfully adapted to the Desert Storm campaign. The Navy's vision was not wrong, just incomplete. It failed to establish a serious joint operations capability. The Gulf War was a needed wake-up call, and it forced the Navy into the realization that the planning and execution of joint operations was the wave of the future."
