NEW WAYS TO REACH THE IRS

The IRS is making it easier and more efficient for you to get the answers to your Federal Tax questions by providing two new toll free numbers. These new toll free numbers represent a substantial difference in how you can contact the IRS.

Starting on December 2, 2002, if you have a business or specialty tax question you can call the new Business and Specialty Tax Line on 1-800-829-4933. Customers calling this number can apply for a new Employer Identification Number (EIN), and receive help on Employment Taxes, Partnership, Corporation, Estate, Gift, Trust and Excise Taxes, or other small business issues. This new number will enable the Internal Revenue Service to provide better service for businesses, with a number dedicated just for them, and better service for customers with individual income tax questions by reserving the traditional 1040 help line (1-800-829-1040) for them.

Access to IRS information will be quicker and easier with fewer topic choices to negotiate within the separate individual and business service lines. Separating the incoming calls by individual and business issues means you will reach a customer service representative who is trained in your topic, more quickly and efficiently. You can continue to obtain assistance with any Form 1040 issue by calling 1-800-829-1040.

If you need information about an individual income tax refund, and have access to the Internet, the fastest way to get assistance is through the “Where’s my Refund?” automated self-service feature, available 24/7. If information is not readily available via the Internet, please call the Refund Hotline at 1-800-829-1954, which is the second new toll free number the IRS has established to provide more efficient service to customers.

The Business and Individual Tax Lines are designed to handle general inquiries. As always, if you have received correspondence from IRS directing you to call a different number, you should call that number to receive the quickest resolution of your specific issue.
