

Acquisition & Business Management Website — ‘One Stop’ Access

Navy Acquisition Reform

5 June 2000, Issue 215

INFO-ALERT

On April 3, 2000 the Acquisition and Business Management (ABM) Office, of the ASN(RDA), rolled out a new design for its web site, ABM On-Line. ABM On-Line provides the Department of the Navy (DoN) Acquisition / Procurement Workforce and its industry partners with “One Stop,” quick and easy access to recent policy, relevant information, resources and tools. The new design includes several new features. It has a redesigned tools guide with a database of over 200 valuable acquisition listings, descriptive drop down menus for the major topic areas, and quick and easy access to the latest policy releases from the front page. All new and past policy releases can still be found in the Policy Section. The site is completely searchable with a feature that offers refined searching.

The site contains something for everyone from the Program Manager to the Contracting Officer. The Business Practices Section, for example, provides the latest information about developing a good risk management program. The FAR/DFAR/NAPS comparison tools allows contracting personnel to view a side-by-side comparison of sections from the Federal, Department of Defense, and DoN acquisition regulations. Visitors can also register to receive e-mail notification of new additions to the policy library, upcoming events, or major changes to the site. Information on the latest conferences and training opportunities is highlighted on the front page, as well as being carried in the Events and Carrier Development Sections. Find out more by visiting ABM Online at <http://www.abm.rda.hq.navy.mil>.
