To Whom It May Concern 7/28/97

All products for sale should have the country of origin on the package, label or stamped on the product.

When a person knows where an item was made it will be their choice to purchase it or not.

Also these mail order catalogs that most people receive offering for sale, all kinds of products, it should be mandatory to indicate where the product was made, or at the very least to state that it's imported.

Many times I have ordered things through the mail order catalogs that I thought were American, made but only to find that when I received them that they were not.

Thank You,
