Greetings

I had a run in with a piece of spyware called "Huntbar". In trying to remove it from a computer system in an office it took down most of the system. This resulted in over ninety hours of labor to repair. Most of the machines had to be wiped and brought back up from scratch. Fortunately only a small amount of data was lost due to remote backups. All systems I work on have Spybot Search and Destroy on them and it runs continuously in the background in addition to Norton and other security software.

Sincerely
