I spent two hours Monday morning cleaning spy ware off my wife's computer. It was not something she wanted, and it slowed the computer down enough to make it virtually useless.

On Tuesday, I had to remove spy ware off a friend's computer. It kept popping up ads for porn sites. Looking at the URL, one could tell right away that it was porn. I spent another two or more hours cleaning this machine, and still had mortgage ads pop up every time IE was started.

This stuff is just plain malicious. To add injury to insult, some of them were trying to sell over-priced software to clean it up!!
