Subject: Spyware Workshop - Comment, P044509

Having been a "victim" of spyware and adware crashes on my computer I would like to add my comments to the current debate on issues concerning them.

Personally I wish that they could be totally outlawed, banned from the intrusion into personal computers. However, we live in America for which I am extremely grateful and believe in the pursuit of gain for all.

My opinion is that the people who wish to put out spy or adware in programs and on websites should be charged with making their intentions known more clearly to those whom they are "infiltrating", and be held responsible for problems caused by their programs. Allowing others to make a more informed of being "infected" with such spy or adware.

Thank you for allowing me to express my opinion.
