Spyware is so far out of control. I went on a site for Disney two day's ago and it greeted me by name. I have NOT ever been to that site before. How on earth did it know who's computer logged in?? That bothers me a lot. I don't understand how and why anyone should have the right to know what I am doing on line without my permission. I don't mind if I sign up for the "spy" in order to keep a site "free" of sorts, but I want to know that I am being "spied" upon and I want it to be something I know about and willing to participate in. Other wise it's all an invasion of my privacy more even than the callers wanting to sell me something in my home. At least with them I can choose to ignore the ringing phone.
