Dear Sirs:

I think it sucks that companies like Gator and others can broadcast their sites onto my computer asking to be downloaded and then costing out at premium rates. It is equally galling to look at their IP address and try to go to their IP address to complain and ask to be unsubscribed only to discover that they've firewalled you.

I can understand why they would want to do this but it simply isn't on when you have young prepubescent boys in the house who are easily sucked in and don't know what they are downloading or paying big bucks for. Can't you guys figure out some way of stopping these broadcast sites?
