ABSTRACT (Maximum 200 words)  The Directory was created to assist transportation data users, policy makers, planners, researchers, information specialists and others in locating statistical contacts and transportation profile in different countries. It lists, by continent, 1,925 contact points in 189 countries, plus 42 dependencies and areas of special sovereignties. Data entries were restricted primarily to government and quasi-government agencies and organizations. In addition to these, there are 59 transnational organizations that span the interests and responsibilities of several countries, and in some cases even continents. These organizations are listed separately. The Directory begins with a list of available embassy contacts accessible by electronic mail (email) and Internet Site Addresses. Following that is presented a special section on transnational organizations. Next, the continents of North America, Central America, South America, Europe, Asia, Africa, and Oceania are displayed as major sections of the Directory, with listings by individual country.

PREFACE

Transportation information has become a global commodity. Individual national economies are now more highly linked, and there is a growing need for transportation, trade, and tourism statistics that are timely, accurate, and accessible. Foremost among tools for acquiring this information are electronic data and computer networks such as the Internet, access to agency staff most familiar with specific topic areas and methods, and directories such as this one. The Bureau of Transportation Statistics, in 1996, first listed the primary contacts for accessing such statistics in one publication, this is an update to the 1996 report. In the future, the Worldwide Transportation Directory will be updated only, as needed. We hope this document will contribute to the expanding list of tools available to help transportation data users find the international information they need to suit their purposes.

I. INTRODUCTION

A principal mission of the U.S. Department of Transportation's (DOT) Bureau of Transportation Statistics (BTS) is to compile and publish information on the transportation system. This document, in its second edition, is designed to provide details on worldwide, country contacts for transportation information.

The Directory was conceived as a method to assist transportation data users, policy makers, planners, researchers, information specialists, and others in locating essential information contacts and statistical agencies in different countries. It lists, by continent, 1,925 contact points in 189 countries, plus 42 dependencies and areas of special sovereignties. Brief transportation statistical profiles are also provided for each country. Whenever possible data entries were restricted primarily to government and quasi-government agencies and organizations. In addition to these, there are 59 transnational organizations that span the interests and responsibilities of several countries, and in some cases even continents. These organizations are listed separately.

As with any document, reader and user feedback is essential. Although we have tried to be as accurate as possible in the compilation of addresses and phone numbers, we recognize that such information often changes. We welcome your comments and suggestions via the attached response card or electronic mail (info@bts.gov), and ask that readers bring to our attention any errors or omissions that are found.

Strategy, Organization and Use of this Document

The Directory begins with a list of available embassy contacts accessible by electronic mail (email) or sites on the Internet. Following that is presented a special section on transnational organizations. Next, the continents of North America, Central America, South America, Europe, Asia, Africa, and Oceania are displayed as major sections of the Directory, with identifying information and listings by individual country.<sup>1</sup>

In order to provide as complete a coverage as possible, information was requested on a wide variety of general and mode-specific data contacts. Contacts for trade statistics and tourism statistics are also given specific entries since the scope of transportation often extends to those areas. Note that not every country had entries for each type of contact point. As a way of introducing each continent, a map of its component countries is displayed in order to assist the reader. The following general hierarchical scheme is used in this document.

- Transnational Organizations
- Country-specific Agencies
  - Continent
    - Country
      - Transportation Profile
      - Contact Points
        - General Statistics (general statistical agency)
          - Contact person, title, address, phone and fax numbers, email, and internet [repeats below]
        - General Transportation Statistics (national transportation agency)
        - Air Statistics
        - Highway Statistics
        - Multimodal Statistics
        - Pipeline Statistics
        - Rail Statistics
        - Transit Statistics
        - Water Statistics
        - Trade Statistics
        - Tourism Statistics

For ease of use, the names of continents are displayed at the top, outside margin of each page, and an alphabetical list of all countries in the world appears in the index at the rear of this document.

<sup>1</sup> Central America, while technically not a continent, is displayed here as such for ease of presentation. Also two agencies located in the United Kingdom oversee the transportation functions in the continent of Antarctica. These agencies are listed after the United Kingdom in Europe.

INTRODUCTION

Data Sources

Several different data sources were used in the preparation of this document. As mentioned earlier, we acknowledge the organizations who granted permission to use their copyright material in this publication. Staff at many foreign embassies located in Washington, D.C., also provided valuable help in identifying key contacts or in updating information already on hand. Identification of countries by continent was done with information obtained from the National Geographic Society.

The Transportation Profiles that appear in section three of this Directory were derived from The World Factbook 1995. The World Factbook is compiled annually by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and includes a comprehensive list of world nations and dependencies with a complete profile describing the area. Included in the profiles are basic facts that are of use to transportation professionals, including, where available: total area (sq km); coastline (km); population; railroads (km); highways (km); inland waterways (km); pipelines (km); major marine ports; and major airports. Any reader interested in further information available in The World Factbook can access it on the World Wide Web at (<http://www.odci.gov/cia/publications/95fact>). It is also distributed by the Central Intelligence Agency, Office of Public and Agency Information, Washington, DC 20505; telephone (703) 351-2053. The CIA makes The World Factbook available in both printed and electronic format.

Foreign Embassies in the United States Accessible on the Internet

Many embassy staffers were helpful in the construction of this Directory. Their first hand knowledge of agency contacts in home countries provided up-to-date information that was incorporated into the document. We have also identified 50 embassies who are now accessible via electronic mail or sites on the Internet. As the number of embassies and contract points who are on-line continues to grow in the years ahead, we will update this list. The list on the following page is provided to users of the Directory who may have specific queries not answerable by the printed information, or who seek more detailed information than is provided in this format.

II. TRANSNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

We identified 59 organizations whose responsibilities and transportation expertise covered two or more countries. Of these, 40 had a worldwide scope of activities, 5 spanned countries in two continents, and 14 covered multiple countries in just one continent. Typically, these organizations are interested in one mode of transportation, although others have interests that are best described as multimodal, or general transportation in nature. Still others are large statistical or information agencies, of which transportation is but one of many focus areas.

III. TRANSPORTATION PROFILES AND CONTACT POINTS BY CONTINENT AND COUNTRY

The following section details transportation profiles and specific points of contact by continent and country. It provides identifying information and lists 1,925 contact points in 189 countries, plus 42 dependencies and areas of special sovereignties. Data entries were restricted primarily to government and quasi-government agencies and organizations whenever possible. The transportation profiles include, where available: total area, coastline; population; railroads; highways; inland waterways; pipelines; major marine ports; and major airports. Contact points are classified by focal points of the organization (i.e. general statistics, general transportation, air, highway, multimodal, rail, pipeline, transit, water, trade, and tourism).
