

Georgia

Georgia ranks 21st among the states in number of local governments, with 1,448 as of June 2002.

COUNTY GOVERNMENTS (156)

The entire area of the state is encompassed by county governments except for the areas of Clarke, Muscogee, and Richmond counties. Muscogee County was consolidated with the city of Columbus in 1971 to form the Consolidated Government of Columbus. Similarly, in January 1991, Clarke County was consolidated with the city of Athens to form the Unified Government of Athens-Clarke County. In January 1996, Richmond County was consolidated with the city of Augusta to form the Augusta-Richmond Consolidated Government. All of these consolidated governments are counted as municipal governments, rather than as county governments, in census reporting. Counties operate under home-rule.

Most Georgia counties are governed by a board of county commissioners, but in some counties the governing authority is a sole county commissioner.

SUBCOUNTY GENERAL PURPOSE GOVERNMENTS (531)

Municipal Governments (531)¹

Municipal governments in Georgia are the cities and towns. The cities and towns operate primarily under charters granted by the general assembly in the form of special laws for individual municipalities, although a 1965 law grants home-rule. There are no significant differences between the cities and towns with regard to legal status and powers that would affect their classification for census purposes.

A 1963 law provides that a minimum population of 200 is required for incorporation as a municipality.

Township Governments (0)

Georgia has no township governments.

¹The Town of Bibb City, located within the area of Muscogee County, continues to exist as a separate municipal government. Similarly, the city of Winterville, located within the area of Clarke County, continues to exist as a separate municipal government. The city of Hephzibah and the town of Blythe continue to exist as separate municipal governments in the Richmond County area.

PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEMS (180)

School District Governments (180)

The following types of school districts in Georgia are counted as separate governments for census purposes:

County boards of education
Independent (city) school districts

The county boards of education in each county administer all local schools in the county except those operated by independent (city) school districts. Members of all county boards of education are elected. The county boards of education determine the amount of money to be raised by local school taxes and may issue bonds.

The independent (city) school districts in Georgia were established by special acts of the legislature prior to the adoption of the 1945 constitution, and the legal provisions under which they operate are therefore not uniform. By provision of the 1983 constitution, new independent school districts cannot be created. The members of the boards of independent school districts are elected. These school districts operate independently of municipal governments and may determine their own budgetary needs.

Dependent Public School Systems (0)

Georgia has no dependent public school systems.

Other Educational Activities

The Houston County School District Building Authority was created by a special act to finance school facilities. It is counted as a dependent activity of the Houston County School District.

The regional educational service agencies provide supplementary services to school districts and are financed by state funds and by contributions from participating school districts. For census purposes, they are classified as joint educational service agencies of the school districts they serve. They are not counted as separate governments. As of June 2002, 16 regional educational service agencies were reported in operation.

Any city, county, county school system, independent school system, or other political subdivision of the state possessing a power to tax may separately or jointly establish, maintain, and operate junior colleges. The creating government establishes a mill tax to help fund the junior college.

Gwinnett Technical Institute is governed by the board of education of Gwinnett County but conforms to state standards applicable to technical colleges. Other technical colleges in Georgia are operated by the state government.

SPECIAL DISTRICT GOVERNMENTS (581)²

Georgia statutes authorize the creation of a variety of special districts or authorities that are counted as governments. These are discussed in detail below.

Airport Authorities—Joint (special acts)

A number of airport authorities serving two or more counties or cities have been authorized by special acts but with similar provisions for administration and operation. The authorities are governed by boards appointed by officials of the establishing governments and, in a few cases, also have one or more local officials serving ex officio. The authorities may issue revenue bonds and impose charges for their facilities and services.

Airport authorities serving a single county or city are not counted as separate governments. See “Subordinate Agencies and Areas,” below.

This authority was created by a 1977 special act to provide such improvements as parking facilities in the downtown area of Albany. The authority may fix and collect fees and issue bonds. The county may choose to support bond issues with county-levied taxes but is not obligated to do so.

Community Improvement Districts

These districts may be created by the Georgia legislature through the enactment of local legislation. They may provide such services as streets, parks, sewage, water, ports, public transportation, parking, and other services as specified in the local legislation. They are governed by boards that can consist of local officials, members elected by property owners, or any combination of the two as specified in the authorizing legislation. Districts may levy ad valorem property taxes, special assessments, and fees as specified in the authorizing legislation and may issue general obligation and revenue bonds. Community improvement districts that are classified as special districts include those in Chatham, Cherokee, Clayton, Cobb, DeKalb, and Gwinnett counties.

Districts that lack the autonomy to be classified as independent governments are classified as dependent agencies of the county or municipality they serve. See “Subordinate Agencies and Areas,” below.

Community Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities, and Addictive Diseases Service Boards

These boards are created by a county or counties to provide services to regions established by the state. They are governed by boards that include members appointed by member counties (based on population) from nominations by the counties’ boards of health; county and municipal officials from jurisdictions contributing a minimum amount to the budget of the board; and one citizen meeting specified requirements appointed by each county. The boards may fix and collect fees. These boards may be referred to as community service boards.

Community mental health, developmental disabilities, and addictive diseases service boards governed by county boards of health are not counted as separate governments. See “Subordinate Agencies and Areas,” below.

Housing Authorities

Housing authorities may be organized in any county or city where the governing body has adopted a resolution declaring the need for a housing authority. The mayor or the county governing body appoints the commissioners of city or county housing authorities, respectively. The authorities may issue bonds and fix and collect rentals. The authorizing resolution determines the composition and size of the board.

The resolution creating the authority specifies the number and composition of the board. The authorities conduct a variety of projects including air and water pollution control facilities, sewage and solid waste disposal facilities, and industrial parks. The authorities may issue revenue bonds. These authorities may be named development authority, industrial development authority, or economic development authority.

Development authorities, whether created by a single government or jointly by two or more governments, may be established by general and special constitutional amendments or special acts. Classification depends on the authorizing legislation. These authorities may be designated as an industrial development authority, industrial development and building authority, industrial building authority, or economic development authority.
