Acknowledgments

We would like to thank the thousands of community people who have used PATCH and other community planning models to assess and improve the health and quality of life in their communities. These materials were updated and designed to provide you with information on the process and on things to consider when adapting the process for your community. Even if you are not undertaking a community planning process, you will find information concerning such things as data use, partnering within and beyond the community, and appropriate levels of evaluation that may help you enrich any community program.
