Holocaust-Era Assets

A Finding Aid to Records at the National Archives at College Park, Maryland

Greg Bradsher

Recent years have seen an explosion in the interest in locating and restoring gold, art, and other assets looted by the Nazis during the Holocaust or unclaimed by Holocaust victims. This aid to locating records at the National Archives at College Park focuses primarily on efforts to identify, recover, and retribute assets hidden or stolen by Nazi Germany during World War II. It also covers topics such as World War II economic warfare and provides a starting point for those interested in other aspects of the Holocaust era, including refugees and war crimes.

Included are descriptions of records relating to: Nazi-looted art and gold; U.S. efforts during 1944 and 1945 to prevent the Axis from secreting their assets in neutral countries ("The Safehaven Program"); the U.S. postwar role in locating and restituting looted assets; unpaid and unclaimed insurance policies; slave and forced labor; looted and misplaced libraries and archives; World War II economic warfare; and enemy and victim assets in the United States.

This comprehensive volume is an essential aid for individuals studying the World War II period in Europe and Latin America. An extensive bibliography of related materials is included.

Guide to Records Relating to U.S. Military Participation in World War II

Compiled by Timothy P. Mulligan

This series of guides identifies and describes the activities of the many military agencies that had a role in World War II. Although these materials emphasize the period December 1941 through September 1945, extensive documentation of the interwar and pre-Pearl Harbor periods is also included. Representing the activities of a broad range of agencies, these guides make accessible a large body of records for the first time.

Part I: Policy Planning, Administration

Part I includes records that cover such topics as formulation of strategy; personnel matters associated with the war; financial matters, including acquisition of land for military installations; legislative issues; and mobilization and training of U.S. military and naval personnel.

American Women and the U.S. Armed Forces A Guide to the Records of Military Agencies in the National Archives Relating to American Women

Compiled by Charlotte Palmer Seeley
Revised by Virginia C. Purdy and Robert Gruber

This important guide describes records in the National Archives and Presidential libraries that relate to American women who interacted with and eventually formed a part of the nation's military service organizations.

Covering the last two centuries, the records highlighted in this volume discuss women as participants in and victims of war, suppliers of military goods and services, and wives and mothers of soldiers. The documents include those of the armed services as well as the War Department collections of Revolutionary War and Confederate records. A comprehensive name and subject index and four appendixes are included. Researchers will find the guide an excellent starting point in the study of the role of the U.S. Government in the lives of American women.

War & Conflict
Selected Images from the National Archives, 1765–1970

Edited by Jonathan Heller

From the Revolutionary War through the Vietnam conflict, this handsome catalog presents over 1,500 arresting black-and-white images relating to American wartime history—selected from the 10 million images located in the National Archives Still Picture Branch. The book is divided into seven sections: the “Revolutionary War” (1775–83); “America Grows” (1799–1848); the “Civil War” (1861–65); “America and World Affairs” (1871–1970); “World War I” (1914–18); “World War II” (1939–45); and the “Korean War” (1950–53). Roughly 40 percent of the images—which include copies of prints, paintings, and posters as well as photographs—depict scenes from World War II. An introduction discusses the history of war photography and the National Archives still picture collection. An index of artists and photographers is also included.

Civil War Guides

The Union
A Guide to Federal Archives Relating to the Civil War

Kenneth W. Munden and Henry Putney Beers

This guide provides an opportunity to study the vast collection of U.S. Government documents in the National Archives that relate to the Civil War. In addition to the records of the conduct of the war, the book describes records relating to the war that were created after Lee's surrender. Substantive administrative histories of the relevant agencies of the Federal Government add to the usefulness of the volume.

The Confederacy
A Guide to the Archives of the Government of the Confederate States of America

Henry Putney Beers

This companion volume to The Union is a guide to the official archives of the government of the Confederate States of America. The bulk of the book describes materials held by the National Archives, but Confederate records maintained at the Library of Congress and at 29 other institutions are also covered, as well as information obtained from repository guides and registers, from the National Union Catalog of Manuscript Collections, and from bibliographies regarding the holdings of other repositories.

Other Military History Titles

A Woman's War Too
U.S. Women in the Military in World War II
Edited by Paula Nassen Poulos

More than 350,000 women volunteered to serve in the U.S. Armed Forces in World War II. This volume, comprising the proceedings of a conference held at the National Archives at College Park, is a compelling account of these volunteers' groundbreaking efforts to establish women's units within the traditional military service branches. Leading figures in women's and military studies, social and military historians, document specialists, and women veterans examined such themes as: "Making History: Women, the Military, and Society," "Contributing to the War Effort," "Confronting the Realities of Service Life," and "Documenting Women's Service: Memoirs, Museums, and Historical Collections." Archival photographs of servicewomen who contributed to the Allied war effort illustrate this much-needed book.

The Documentary Evidence

Compiled, translated, and captioned by Robert Wolfe

Introduction by Henry J. Gwiazda II

Once in power the Nazis attempted to build a new social order in Europe—a society based on race and created through military force, mass murder, and mass slavery. NARA has preserved thousands of captured documents of their effort. This catalog offers a small but important selection of these records, focusing primarily on Hitler's "final solution to the Jewish question." The introduction outlines the immediate historical context of the documents and discusses World War II, Nazi ideology, and the racial war against the Jews and other non-Aryans.

Soldiers and Civilians

The U.S. Army and the American People

Edited by Garry D. Ryan and Timothy K. Nenninger

This volume brings together essays by historians, Army officers, archivists, and other Government officials discussing the interrelationships between the Army and the American people over the past 150 years. Among the topics discussed are military policy as a reflection of American society, the social makeup of the Army community, the lasting results of the Army presence on certain American localities, and the Army as an agent of social change and as a means of social control. Contributors include Andrew J. Goodpaster, Edward M. Coffman, Merritt Roe Smith, and Russell F. Weigley.

The Secrets War

The Office of Strategic Services in World War II

Edited by George C. Chalou

This volume contains the proceedings of the first major scholarly conference on the Office of Strategic Services (OSS), which was held at the National Archives Building on July 11 and 12, 1991—exactly 50 years after President Franklin D. Roosevelt appointed William J. Donovan Coordinator of Information. Donovan continued to head the organization when it was renamed the Office of Strategic Services in 1942. Through the war years the OSS served the intelligence needs of the United States. It was terminated by order of President Harry S. Truman in the fall of 1945.

These 24 papers—presented at the conference by veterans and historians of the OSS—offer new insights into the activities and importance of the United States first modern national intelligence agency. The first of eight sections discusses the United States on the brink of war. The following six cover the operations of the OSS at the headquarters level and in the field throughout Western Europe, the Balkans, and Asia. The final chapter explores the legacy of the OSS. Contributors include Arthur Schlesinger; William Colby; Aline, Countess of Romanones; Walt W. Rostow; and Robin Winks.

Microfilm Catalogs

NARA has microfilmed over 3,000 series of Federal records that contain a wealth of valuable information for scholars and other researchers. A comprehensive catalog that lists these microfilm publications by record group is available as are catalogs for Federal population censuses covering the years 1790–1920. In addition, NARA has published subject catalogs that list publications by topic and provide roll-by-roll lists of contents. For information on ordering rolls of microfilm, contact the Customer Service Center (NWCC2), Room 1000, 8601 Adelphi Road, College Park, MD 20740-6001 (telephone 1-800-234-8861 or 301-837-2000, fax 301-837-0483).

Microfilm Resources for Research A Comprehensive Catalog Revised

This newly revised catalog lists each publication by record group, microfilm number and title, number of rolls, and whether there is a descriptive pamphlet. There are more than 3,000 publications listed, including over 300 new releases since the last edition.

Inventories, Preliminary Inventories, and Special Lists

Inventories and preliminary inventories provide researchers with series-level descriptions of the holdings of individual record groups in the National Archives. Each inventory and preliminary inventory also contains an administrative history of the agency that accumulated the records described. Special lists describe in detail the contents of certain important record series or units of records of the same form or function. The special list presents information at the level of individual record items. All three of these types of publications are available free of charge.
