Major Leadership Election Contests in the House of Representatives, 94th - 107th Congresses

Summary

This report contains data on votes for Speaker of the House and elections in party conferences or caucuses for major leaders within each party from the 94th through 107th Congresses. It reflects actual balloting on the House floor for Speakers and in the Democratic Caucus and Republican Conference for other positions. Table 1 identifies the votes for Speaker. Tables 2-14 provide the names and states of the candidates for each of the major party offices, the Congress(es) in which they ran, and the votes they received. Also noted are Members elected with no opposition. Although most caucus or conference balloting for other leadership positions took place prior to the convening of a new Congress, in some cases leadership elections were held to fill vacancies during a Congress.

The 14 tables herein provide data on the individuals receiving votes for Speaker and the party elections for the following positions:

- House Democratic Floor Leader,
- House Republican Floor Leader,
- House Democratic Whip,
- House Republican Whip,
- House Democratic Caucus Chairman,
- House Republican Conference Chairman,
- House Democratic Caucus Secretaries/Vice Chairman,
- House Republican Conference Vice Chairman,
- House Republican Conference Secretary,
- House Republican Policy Committee Chairman,
- House Republican Research Committee Chairman,
- House National Republican Congressional Committee Chairman, and
- House Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee Chairman.

Since 1974, there have been no formal contests within either party for the election of the Speaker of the House. Where there were contested races for other positions, most were decided after one ballot. In a few races, two ballots were needed. Three ballots were necessary before a Democratic floor leader was elected for the 95th Congress, and before a Republican leader was elected for the 106th Congress.

The data do not include notices of announced candidacies that were abandoned before caucus or conference voting took place.

Major Leadership Election Contests in the House of Representatives, 94th - 107th Congresses

Introduction

This report contains data on votes for Speaker of the House and elections in party conferences or caucuses for major leaders within each party from the 94th through 107th Congresses. It reflects actual balloting on the House floor for Speakers and in the Democratic Caucus and Republican Conference for other positions. Table 1 identifies the votes for Speaker. Tables 2-14 provide the names and states of the candidates for each of the major party offices, the Congress(es) in which they ran, and the votes they received. Also noted are Members elected with no opposition. Although most caucus or conference balloting for other leadership positions took place prior to the convening of a new Congress, in some cases leadership elections were held to fill vacancies during a Congress.

The 14 tables herein provide data on the individuals receiving votes for Speaker and the party elections for the following positions:

- House Democratic Floor Leader,
- House Republican Floor Leader,
- House Democratic Whip,
- House Republican Whip,
- House Democratic Caucus Chairman,
- House Republican Conference Chairman,
- House Democratic Caucus Secretaries/Vice Chairman,
- House Republican Conference Vice Chairman,
- House Republican Conference Secretary,
- House Republican Policy Committee Chairman,
- House Republican Research Committee Chairman,
- House National Republican Congressional Committee Chairman, and
- House Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee Chairman.

Since 1974, there have been no formal contests within either party for the election of the Speaker of the House. Where there were contested races for other positions, most were decided after one ballot. In a few races, two ballots were needed. Three ballots were necessary before a Democratic floor leader was elected for the 95th Congress, and before a Republican leader was elected for the 106th Congress.

In many of the Congresses, at least one leader was selected without opposition. In those instances where published accounts did not mention contests for a particular office, it was assumed there was only one candidate. In a few instances, published sources did not provide data on votes cast in particular contest.

The data do not include notices of announced candidacies that were abandoned before caucus or conference voting took place.

The sources for this report include various editions of the Congressional Record, Congressional Quarterly Weekly Reports, and Congressional Staff Directories.

- a. For much of the period since 1974, the chairman of the House National Republican Congressional Committee have been appointed by House leaders. However, from the 101st Congress through the 104th Congress, the chairman was elected by the Republican Conference. Only in 1990 and 1998, during the organization for the 102nd and 106th Congresses, have there been contests.
- b. In November 1996, during the organizational meetings for the 105th Congress, the chairman of the House National Republican Congressional Committee was appointed by Speaker of the House, Newt Gingrich (See: Jackie Koszczuk, “Despite Rumbblings, Gingrich Has No Serious Challenger,” Congressional Quarterly Weekly Report, Vol. 54, November 16, 1996, p. 3277).
- c. In November 1998, during its organizational meetings for the 106th Congress, the Republican Conference changed its rules to make the chairmanship of the committee an elected position rather than an appointed one (See Jeffrey L. Katz and Carroll J. Doherty, “New GOP Leaders’ Watchword Is Realism, Not Revolution,” Congressional Quarterly Weekly Report, Vol. 56, November 21, 1998, p. 3166).
